He remembers that about the list of April he and his father saw a small book, in which were four men, put ashore at this point. It was an inky black night, and it was not safe for small craft in the wind-cosed water of Cornwall bay.

And saw the company, who were distinguished by the lanterns they carried, work their way up the mountain side. About twenty minutes after the landing the lights were lost sight of at a point about one hundred feet from the water's edge.

And the were lost sight of at a point about one hundred feet from the water and the same content of the contained one of those mercantile caves to make ready for the year's business. No one has ventured near the place, although several hunters say that there is an opening at the spot designated by the Cornwall man. It is believed that this cave is the main resort of river pirates and robbers, who plunder in the locality.

This site is particularly lonely and deserted. It can be located by passengers on the day boats as they are passing. It is about three hundred feet weat of the place where an attempt has been made to quarry stone for crashing, and to reach it one must run the risk of being bitten by the most work of the locality.

LOVE'S KISSES.

Hex was fromed to 1ºs Exemple for itself.

The scientists are constantly as suring us after indestructibility of matter and force, says Life.

It was the top of the morning. The sun had just gathered up the day. "Most favorable weather." Love reflected, as he finished weather, in the same and set out leisurely across the fields. He looked right and left with bright, trained eyes for kisses in the grass. Sometimes he passed one without seeing it at first, but then he went back for it.

As he walked he saw a girl strolling along and stopping to pick up things and put them in a box that was strapped from her shoulder. Love was fond of company, so he burried a little to join the girl. She looked up at him as she knelt searching for scientific specimens and she smiled a little involuntarity, for Love cuts an odd figure when he is out on business. Then she notinged his basket and took him serionally. "What are you collecting?" she

"People are so careless with them," he explained. "I have to come out every day and collect them, or they would all get scattered and lost and people would forget about them."
"But doesn't it take you a great deal of time?" she asked.
"Index oft does," replied Love.
"It leaves me almost no time for study. But this is the way I earn my living. It would be easier if I had some one to help me."

The minister of a congregation in an agricultural district was greatly annoyed Sunday after S mn day by the unruly conduct of the junior members of his flock. When any of the younger representatives of the gentler sex got weary of the evening service she would invariably rise and go out. A moment later her admirer would seize his hat and sheepishly follow her. To such an extent would this course of action prevail that by the time the discourse was finished only the old people remained for the conclusion of the service. Mr. Jones concealed his chagrin for several weeks, but at last he firmly resolved to act. A youth grew drowsy one Sunday evening, and, picking up his hat, stepped into the alsle. But the minister's keen eye was upon him, and, to the culprit's dismay, he stopped short in his sermon.

"Young man," said he, "the girl who went out last is not the one you wish to walk home with. When she goes I will let you know at once. Please sit down. After this, when a young woman goes out I will call on the proper young man to take care of her."

The minister resumed his discourse. There was much tittering and considerable anger, but his ser-

The Cook Became an Amazon.

My good wife sent south a year ago for a domestic servant of color who could do the cooking, froning and washing for our small family of four. She came from Asheville, and weighed, I should say, not less than three hundred pounds when she arrived. We did not work her very hard. We waited on her most diligently, for we both were afraid she might get homesick and leave us. There was nothing that we did not do for her. But all our efforts were vain. A week ago she departed, informing us she had found an easier place. Yesterday George, my eldest son, thought a trip to Cony Island would enliven us. We rode on all the trick railroads and down the chutes. We shot at the balls and threw at the cats. Finally we brought up before the Dahomey village, and went in to see the "sixteen genuine amazons" advertised on the bunting outside. There on the left end of therow sat our Mary. But for her color she would have blushed at sight of us. As it was she hid her face in her hands, and dropped her wicked spear and raw, hide shield. We said nothing. We looked and departed for home.—N. Y. Press.

The Mean Man in Town.
The champion mean man paid San Francisco a visit recently. He was a big, long-legged, raw-boned fellow with a nose like the olade of a hatchet. His eyes, like little black beads, were set within half an inch of each other and glistened and sufferent to give him a cup of coffee. The waiter brought it with some bread and butter and laid down a check for ten cents.

"Would you give me a extrapitcher to give him a cup of coffee. The waiter brought it.

"Yes, by the way, give me a cup of hot water, will you, please?"
The waiter brought it.

The waiter brought it and watched mean man curiously. He poured the cream into the hot water, put a little sugar in it, showed it at his wife and flung one slice of bread without any butter in her direction.

The little woman ate it hungrilly and the waiter added five cents to the mean man's check.

Mind for Car Fenders.

An enormous number of trolley car fenders has poured into the patent office at Washington for registry. A traction company official said a few days ago that he had examined plans of three thousand and uine different designs submitted by inventors, and then he had to put up a sign: "No trolley fenders wanted." All sorts of ideas have been utilized to keep the tracks clear of pedestrians. There are hideous bells and noise generators to scare people off, cow-catchers to knock them off, revolving brooms to sweep them off, and now comes a Philadelphia inventor with a devise for blowing them off. He has just been granted a patent. His apparatus consists of a tank in the forward part of the car, lightly charged with gas or air, with nozales arranged at an angle. In front and under the dasher is a pivoted framework forming a trigger. As these are touched by a ner. an iront and under the dasher is a pivoted framework forming a trigger. New England Cities.

The race for third place among the cities of New England is rather an interesting one. In 1890, according to the federal census of that year, Worcester's population was 84,655 and that of New Haven 81,298, while at the present time each claims a total of 100,000. Lowell is close behind, and Fall River, provided its growth is not impeded by unfavorable industrial conditions, will give its slightly larger rivals a tussle for the advantage in the next half decade. Meanwhile Providence retains its old title of the "second city of New England" by a large majority and will pass the 200,000 mark within a very few years, even if none of the current annexation projects get beyond the stage of discussion.

R. M. Conway, Agt,

Aluminium has proved a great disappointment to those who were enthusiastic in bringing it before the public. Instead of the durability and strength, hardness and general adaptability that were promised, it is almost a failure when used in its pure state for many purposes. It lacks the tensile strength and rigidity that were supposed to belong to it, and in many other ways falls far short of the standard originally set for it. As a combination metal it is, however, of great value. Among its uses is that of making horseshoes specially designed for racing purposes and lighter uses. Fine particles of extremely hard steel are mixed with the aluminium and form a wearing surface of great durability. The combination makes very pretty, light shoes, which for certair, kinds of work have proved very satisfactory. N. Y. Lodger.

DRAFIED BY JEFFERSON.

Over one hundred years ago our forfeathers decided they were able to establish and maintain a monetary system without the aid of England. The man who drafted that bill was the ablest statesman of the age—who drafted the declaration of indepen dence—Thos. Jefferson—the father of Democracy. It tells you that gold and silver shall constitute the standard money of the country. [Applause] Under that Democratic system we grew and prospered for eightly years—until 1873 when in an evil hour this as Republican congress under the leadership of John Sherman. For 20 odd years Sherman was engaged in trying to find some one who could testify that the act of 1873 was fairly passed and never succeeded until within the past six months. It was passed at midnight and fraudulently. [Applause]. The text of the bill shows fraud upon its face.

A JAP'S VIEWS.

"I am sure that Japan will yet be a great resort for American tortists. Before coming to New York I bad visited Europe, and the thing that has struck me most since I arrived here is that this country is very much like the European countries I have seen. The streets there and here are the same; the residences and business buildings are the same; coar the manners and customs, the garto, the religion, the theaters, the food, and everything else. I do not understand why so many Americans go to England, or France, or Germany every year, and why they do not go to some country that is different from their own. When the American travels in Japan be sees things every year, and why they do not go to some country that is different from their own. When the American travels in Japan he sees things unlike any he ever saw before. The people are of autother race; we have an ancient history and many things of antiquity; we have arts that are all our own; we have a social system that has descended to us from prehistoric times; you can go into Buddhist temples or into playf ouses unlike yours; you can everywhere notice the atiding influence of our two great religions, which you call pagan; you can see novelties of every kind, all on hands, in a country which is healthy and beautiful and orderly, and which is inhabited by a people whom foreigners characterize as excessive in their politeness. A Japanese of distinction in his own country has come to this for the purpose, as he says, of "looking at things." A SORRY BULLHEAD.
Interfered with a Water Motor and Came to a Bad End.
One little buil-head species of the catfish escaped from Lake McKusick some time since, and, no doubt, is sorry for it; we are, anyway. He came down the mains of the water company and floated up the pipes leading to our motor, where he stopped; so did our motor, presses, etc. He didn't use good judgment, as he went into the motor tail first, just fitting so that he stopped the machine. Had he gone at it head first, the opening was such that he wouldn't have stopped the machine and called into active service the waterworks man and a machinist. He would have kept going around in such a lively manner that, in the course of time, his mother-in-law wouldn't have recognized him. Bob Butler thinks he bad him on his hook once out in McKusick's lake, when he was a boy—2.b, not the fish-judging from his antiquated appearance. Friday is without question the proper day for fish, but catching them in a water motor is mighty unprofitable business. System Needs Changing.

A man of ingenious mind and apparently ample leisure has gone to the trouble of figuring out the number of lawsuits brought in each country in a year and he has reached the conclusion that the United States is a better country for attorneys and counselors than any other civilized land under the sun, says the New York Sun. He figures as lawsuits sivil actions only, taking into no account proceedings of a criminal character brought by the public authorities against individuals. He has ascertained that, taking the figures for the last ten years as a fair average, there are 1,250,000 lawsuits brought in England every year, 750,000 in France, 1,400,000 in Italy, 3,300,000 in Germany and 5,500,000 in the United States.

It is not be inferred from this

MANY LAWSUITS.

Citizens of the United States Are brought in England every year, 730,000 in Flank, 3,300,000 in Germany and 5,500,000 in the United States.

It is not to be inferred from this that the people of one country are much more prone to litigation than are the people of another, but the explanation is to be found in the fact that the conditions of litigation vary exceedingly. Going to law in England is very expensive business, for it entails outlays in the form of costs and expenses so large that many of the courts are practically closed to persons of modest means and a long litigation unsuccessfully pursued ends often in bankruptcy. In France the number of lawsuits is kept down through the general practice of "arbitration," as many as 100,000 cases in a year, especially those arising from disputes over wages, being settled by this agency without onerous cost to either party. In Germany a great majority of cases are petty ones, involving a small amount of money and due, many of them, to customs or usages which are not sufficiently defined to be, in all cases, similarly understood by both parties to an agreement. This is especially the case in the farming districts of Germany and there are many legal disputes in the manufacturing districts of Germany and there are many legal disputes in the manufacturing districts of Germany and there are many legal disputes in the manufacturing districts of Germany and there are many legal disputes in the manufacturing districts of Germany and there are many legal disputes in the manufacturing districts of Germany and there are many legal disputes in the manufacturing districts of Germany and there are many legal disputes in the farming districts of Germany and there are many legal disputes in the manufacturing districts. There are, for example, eleven district courts for the disposal of civil cases in New York city. In one of these courts, Interest and the case of the disposal of civil cases in the manufacturing districts.

it is probably accurate. There are, for example, eleven district courts for the disposal of civil cases in New York city. In one of these courts, by recent report, the number of actions brought in a year was shown to be 9,100. These courts have before them each year on the average 75,000 cases. The cases brought in the state courts of New York amount in a year to about 180,000, and of those brought in the foderal courts New York furnishes a very large number. If affing the whole country through it is seen that the average number of cases per thousand of population is in the neighborhood of 7to 85. The number of lawyers in the United States is materially arger than in other country in the word, and the amounts in dispute here are much greater than elsewhere.

ELECTRICAL EXECUTION

ELECTRICAL EXECUTION.

An Uncomfortable Feeling Growing Up Against It.

When one can read accounts of resuscitations of persons supposed to have been killed by electrical shocks, it can but strike the inquiring mind somewhat unpleasantly when the announcement is made that criminals are put to death by electricity. Of course, the autopsy after the execution settles the matter for good and all, but the intelligent physician must have a very vivid imagination and a great deal of nerve deliberately to put a kindle into a man who is, according to the best accepted theories, merely in a condition of suspended animation.

Not long since a man received a shock from a dyname and was apparently dead for an hour, then artificial respirations and rhythmical tractions restored him. So clearly are the methods of treatment indicated, that certain electric companies have had members of their force drilled in all of the necessary manipulations of resuscitation, and have prepared on their own premises apartments with all of the requisite appliances for immediate use in case of accident.

It seems an almost unquestionable fact that electricity does not kill appliances for immediate use in case of accident.

It seems an almost unquestionable fact that electricity does not kill unless the body is burned to a degree almost sufficient in itself to cause death. Of course, one cannot count with any accuracy on what the effect of electricity may be. It would seem that persons differ in their ability to withstand the shock of this most mysterious element. If the victim is left to himself or the accident occurs where there is no help at hand, in due course of time he dies. When the application of the current is the result of a judicial decision, he is at once cut to pieces, and, of course, there is no telling what effect efforts to restore him night have had. There is a rather uncomfortable feeding growing up in the community against electrical execution.—N. Y. Ledger.

Glass Bricks.

Glass Bricks.

Hollow bricks of glass are being used in the construction of the walls of winter gardens and plant houses. They are so set that the hollows are filled with rarefied sir, which is a non-conductor of heat. The bricks are laid in a cement that unites the entire mass firmly. It is thought to be possible to use bricks without any support, and experiments are being made on roofing with this glass, which, put up in arch shape, will, it is hoped, be sufficiently strong to answer all purposes without the wood or iron frames ordinarily used in such buildings. Houses of this material are said to be heated at much less cost than those made after other methods. The light comes through the bricks, and extra windows are not necessary. The system is thought to combine great strength and economy, and if it is a success will almost revolutionize the building of plant houses.

On the main business street—indeed, but a stone's throw from the bustie of the shops—a river of heliotrope, in effect, breaks at your feet. For the width of a block the luxuriant mass of greenery and flowers climbs a low stone wall and tumbles to the pavement several feet below. All the air is full of fragrance, and the prodigality of blossoms tempts many tree passing fingers; and if the passersity looks longingly and hesitates, he is sure to be informed that "the flowers are planted that they may be freely picked."

Mrs. Slepherd goes on earnestly preaching that there is a field and al livelihood in the culture of flowers for many women, if they will but engage in it with earnestness and patience. A neighbor in Venturaby-the-Sas who was, like Mrs. Shepherd herself, disbarred from devoting herself to indoor pursuits from ill health, took up the hybridizing of some of the common garden flowers, under the instruction of the more experienced workwoman, and has made so thorough a success of it that she has acquired an almost world wide reputation as a "betunia expert." This enterprising little worker sold all her seed the second year to a prominent eastern seedsman, who gave the flowers the name of the "Giants of California."

Relics of Mastodons on Puget Sound

Relics of Mastodons on Puget Sound.

Another relic of the prehistoric elephant, of which Whidby island seems to have been a favorite feeding ground in past geologic ages, was found by E. O. Lovely on the morth side of Penn's cove the other morning. While walking along the beach near the Vroman place he noticed protruding from the bank what appeared to be a large bone. By digging he found that it was a huge tusk, from which a set of billiard balls six or more inches in diameter could have been carved. He dug out a section two and a half feet in length. Upon exposure to the air it soon lost its bory appearance and crumbled away. The strata of Whidby island have long been known to be rich in fossil remains, especially in those of the mastodon or prehistoric elephant, numerous traces of which have been uncovered by the crumbling of banks along the shores.—Coupeville
